It differs significantly from standard or literary Swahili, which is more structured and adheres to grammatical norms prescribed by language authorities like the Kenya Institute of Curriculum Development or the Tanzania Education Ministry.

While formal Swahili is used in education, media, and official documents, colloquial Swahili is the language of street vendors, young people, friends, and family. It reflects regional dialects, incorporates slang, and often features contractions, idiomatic expressions, and loanwords from other languages like English, Arabic, and local dialects.

Colloquial Swahili frequently involves shortening words or phrases:

- "Sijui" (I don't know) becomes "sijui", but in rapid speech, it might be shortened to "sij".
- "Nataka" (I want) can be contracted to "nataka" or even "naka" in very casual speech.

Pronunciation often shifts in colloquial Swahili:

- The pronunciation of vowels may be more relaxed.
- Certain consonants may be elided or softened.
